A Noble Letter from Robert C.

Governor Orr spoke at Philadelph a for the Union as it is as a representative from South Carolina, and Robert C Winthrep, a noble patriot and a Union man from Massachusetts, sent a letter, which speaks for the Unionism of the old Bay State. It was written from Brooklyn, N. Y., but Mr. Winthrep has all his life been identified with Massachusett, and we suppose here the work therefore he considered as Winthrop. dentified with Massachusett , and we supunofficially representing Massachus tts.

And we are glad she has so a le and so patriotic a representative. His letter constitutes a fitting response to the fraconstitutes a fitting response to the fra-ternal appeal of South Carolina through Governor Orr. Men from Massachusetts and South Carolina have done much mis-chief and have contributed not a little to the sectional irritation that has cursed the land. It is time they should endeavor to undo the evils they have caused. It is time their representatives should march the representatives should march the constitution.

May we not reasonably hope that the creat mass of good men belonging to the Repu can Party will review the s taation and give in their adherence to the great President and his constitutional advisers, and which, confessedly, has the warm father of the Republican Party, and many others who, they must admit, are patriotic, Union men? Is it not better to have the country fully restored to a condition of harmony, and to trust to time, to discussion, and to public opinion to correct whatever may need correcting either South or North than to prolong a state of things which so many sagacions and cer tainly excellent men look upon as full of peril to the best interests of the whole country? Why let a few pestilent Northern Secessionists and their allies in Kentucky and elsewhere keep the country in constant discord? Because a few mischievous persons seek to identify themshould that movement itself be opposed and condemned, when the great majority have so long been cursing the Union and the Constitution as "au agreement with bell and a covenant with death"? Are who have said that they would scruple at mothing to accomplish their ends? those who declared that "over all constitutions and all laws, all organizations either of church or state—including the Constitution and the Union—they would ride in order to overthrow an institution confessedly constitutional and lawful at the time? Admit that at the time we refer to the Secessionists of the South were acting in unison with these Northern Disunion traitors, and that the former very generally now support the President, do not all the reasona le and fair-minded Southern men now confess that they are done forever with separation, and do they not won declare both by words and deeds that hexeforth they are for the redshifted as the theorem of the South since the impression was made in that section by the President's quarrel with Congress that he was for the reconstruction of the rebellion rather than of the nation. Every intelligent reader will involuntarily contrast the speeches of Mr. Pendleton in Pennsylvania and Kentucky, and the contrast is not to the advantage of the latter. The following is Mr. Winthrop's letter:

exercise of their Constitutional powers, to the enjoyment of their Constitutional privileges in the national government.

I can add nothing, I am aware, to the arguments which others have already presented on this subject, and I gladly avail myself of the language of Judge Curtis in his late admirable letter: "To suppose that the Government of the United States can, in a state of peace, rightfully hold and exercise absolute and unlimited power over a part of its territory and people just to long as it may choose to do so, appears to me unawarranted by any rules of public law, abhorrent to right reason, and inconsistent with the nature of our Government." With Judge Curtis, too, I hold to the opinion—"that the Southern States are now as rightfully, and should be as effectually, in the Union, as they were before the madness of their people attempted to carry them out."

fore the madness of their people attempted to conciliate, to conciliate the North, because he knows well that the North is, and must necessarily be, the governing section. The Kentneky Secessionists in the late e-mapaign sought to exasperate and inflame the North, to ronse all the old sectional principle, or anything of true factional principle, or anything of true factions and principle, or anything of true factions are factions. The Kentneky Secessionists in the late e-mapaign sought to exasperate and inflame the North, to ronse all the old sectional principle for the faction of the fact arm in arm into a Union convention and for national purposes. They have done much to lacerate and convulse the country they should do something now to heal and to quiet it.

I have no disposition, however, to induce the representation and in any imputations either upon parties or upon individuals. I hope that a spirit of forbearance and moderation will prevail at Philadelphia, notwithstanding the insulting and proscriptive tone in which the Convention has been assailed by some of the President which the Convention has been assailed by so many of the opponeuts of the President for United States. But I shall be greatly disappointed. I confess, if through that as our institutions were formed through the spirit of concession and compromise, so they ever must, if at all, be maintained. He gives his soul and heart to this National Union Convention.

I am sincerely sensible to the honor conferred upon me yesterday by the meeting at Fancail Hall, over which you presided, in placing my name at the head of the Delegates at Large to the Nation Union Convention. But, as I had previously intimated to more than one of our friende, it will not be in my power to go to Philadelphia next week. I am quite nawilling however, to decline the appointment without a distinct expression of my hearty concurrence in the general views of those by whom that Convention has been called, and of my carnest hope that its deliberations may conduce to the earliest practicable restoration of all the States of the Union to the exercise of their Constitutional powers to the enjoyment of their Constitutional privileges in the national government.

I esteem myself fortunate in being ho red with an invitation to address you ored with an invitation to address you of the opening of your campaign in this State. Ten years ugo, I stood before the Democracy of Pennsylvania in Independence Square, with the late distinguished Judge Donglas, [applause], when we ex-pressed our opinions pefore the Demo-cratic masses of Pennsylvania.

Since then great changes have occurr show you that the professions of the peo-ple of the South, since laying down their arms, are sincere and ought to be respect-ed. They believed they had the right to second from the Union. You thought not They were brought up in a different school. Appeal to arms was made, and a long and bloody one. General Rousseau is no stranger to the people of the District or the State or country. His course in Congress is pretty well known to our citizens. Resolved, That a Committee on Finance as a pointed, to a oneist of delegates from ach State and Territory and the District of Columbia.

Mr Fatton, on belaff of the Pennsylvania Delegation, seconded the call and the cheers were enthusia tically given.

The address contains about $,000 words, and will make not far from four solid columns in the New York morning papers. It demands the universal acknowledgment of the legitimate consequences of the war, the perpetual maintenance of the Union and the destruction of slavery.

It asserts next that the Government acquired no new rights or powers by the war; that it acted only on the defensive. Congress had passed a resolution that when the war closed all the powers and dignity of the States should remain unimpaired. The power assumed by the Government in the States since the war closed was in violation of the Constitution. The Constitution declares that no State shall, The resoltion was adopted.
